

Pre-screening

You'll answer some questions about your health and medical history (usually online or over the phone) and make an appointment to learn more.

Informed Consent

At your appointment, you'll spend time with the study team to review the details of the study, including possible risks and benefits, so you'll know what to expect. If you decide to participate, you'll give written permission for additional screenings and access to your health records.

Screening Visit

This visit will confirm that you meet the study requirements. It includes a more detailed review of your medical history and a physical exam and may also include additional tests related to your condition.

96%

of people who participated in a clinical trial would be willing to do it again*

9 out of 10 participants would recommend a clinical trial to their friends or family member*

Last year, 60,000 people participated in Pfizer clinical trials